

AUDITING

Auditing – a true and clear picture of your business

Most businesses see Auditing as a legal requirement that is an expense which provides no value. At Dillon Partners we take a different view. As an essential part of our Audit process we endeavour to add value for our clients. We aim to use the detailed knowledge we gain during the course of the audit to help you understand your business better so that you can improve its operation.

As part of the audit process, your Dillon Partners advisor details opportunities for business development or enhanced financial control, together with recommendations addressing accounting and internal control weaknesses.

Most importantly, your Dillon Partners audit provides a clear and realistic view of your organisation's performance - the data you need to make informed decisions and plan for success.

Investigations – know where you stand

The same rigorous process of analysis applied by Dillon Partners advisors during the audit of your organisation is equally valuable when assessing new business ventures and acquisitions.

Whenever you need to have a full, independent and thoroughly objective analysis of any business arrangement, you can count on the expertise and integrity of Dillon Partners specialist accountants.

Dillon Partners – large enough to know, small enough to care

We appreciate how important it is to have the right advice when you need it from an expert who really knows you, your business, your aims and your approach.

That's one of the reasons why your Dillon Partners advisor takes a very personal interest in your affairs. And not just at tax time either. Your advisor is always just a phone call away, even outside office hours.

As a medium-sized business, we know what it means to work closely with clients and although Dillon Partners is unfailingly professional, we're also very approachable.
